Zoo Renewal: White Flight and the Animal Ghetto (University of Minnesota Press, 2015). Tracks the revitalization of U.S. zoos in the 1960s and 70s by situating its turn to global wildlife conservation within the racial and spatial affects and logics of U.S. urban renewal.

Open Black: Spaces of Western Unsettlement (manuscript in process). Following design practices initiated by African-American artists, performers, and heritage workers, the project details how spatial forms of blackness since the 1960s have reconfigured settler constructions of open space.
